THE PRODUCERS' COMMISSION.

NATION.

Probable Co-operation on the Part of the St. Petersburg Operators.

Special to the Herald.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 29—9:30 p.m.

In conversation with some of the leading operators here tonight, I learn that a hearty co-operation in the movement to advance the price of oil will doubtless be pledged on the part of the St. Petersburg operators. The pledge has been actively circulated here to-day by Mr. R. B. Allen.

Mr. Barclay and others, and they are confident that the operators will come into the movement, and so soon as the St. Petersburg operators are in the movement, the price of oil will be advanced. The reason for their holding back has been, so far as I can learn, first, the feeling that sufficient consideration has not been shown them in perfecting the details of the movement, and second, a distrust of the sincerity of the Parker's Landing operators in their pledge not to start more wells.

The published proceedings of both meetings show that no slight was put upon them intentionally or unintentionally, and, in fact, the St. Petersburg committee was named by men from this place. Of course the importance of this district is recognized by everybody, and it is perfectly apparent that there are no foolish, even if as disposed, and certainly no such disposition is manifested as to slight the St.

Petersburg operators. The meeting yesterday, I think, disipated the feeling of distrust of the sincerity of the Parker's operators, and their personal presence at the meeting to-morrow and expressions, if hearty co-operation and action is to be the result, will be sufficient to convince the most doubting.

It is, I think, safe to predict that the meeting will be a success. Let there be a full turnout and it certainly will. E. Y. B.

ST. PETERSBURG.

Three New Streets.

Special to the Herald.

St. Petersburg, August 29.

Last evening, at five o'clock, the Wilson

Irwin well, on the Ellington farm, suddenly flowed, and to one p.m. to-day, when I visited it, had flowed three hundred barrels. It will probably prove a good hundred barrel well.

The well on the same farm owned by Jas.

Hughes and Ben McCracken reached the surface on Tuesday, and is now pumping about eighty barrels.

The well in the New City Farm, owned by

Jas. McCracken, reached the surface on Wednesday, and is now pumping about fifty barrels. It is known as Pioneer

No. 4.

The Great Petroleum Movement.

The producers and refiners show every indication of arriving at a speedy natural understanding, or coalition, by means of which both crude and refined petroleum will eventually assume a standard value of between four and five dollars per barrel, and each individual will receive a fair and legitimate margin of profit. This has become a necessity, as while the two great interests have been quarrelling, the one bailing and the other bearing the market, the ring speculators have been making money out of the spoils. There are more rich men to-day in New York who have realized princely fortunes out of oil comers and who have never produced nor refined a barrel of oil in their lives, than there are in the whole of this State. There is now a tremendous upheaval going on among producers with a spirit of determination to organize into associations for their mutual self protection. The refiners on their side have already almost completely perfected their organization. When two such bodies march in solid phalanx to defeat a common enemy, it certainly looks ominous for good.

The struggle should remember the crucificial nature of the movement, the whole body suffers with it. The great cry now is coalesce, combine, co-operate, and the only ones who will suffer in the end, will be those who, from their selfishness or extraneous interests, are cut off from the main body.
